ARTISTE'S METEOROLOGY.

METEOROLOGY PARISTE. Traduit en Français par la première édition, de Notes peintes par M. J.-B. BERTHÉMONT.

L'Encyclopédie, 1769.

The accomplished Orientalist M. Barthé- lamy St.-Hilaire, is well known as an elegant and scholarly writer. His 'Meteorology' is a remarkable work, containing a series of his meteorological observations and experiments, and is intended as an introduction to the study of meteorology. It is a valuable addition to the literature of the subject, and is concerned with the general principles of the science, rather than with the detailed observations and conclusions of individual observers.
THE READER.

21 June, 1853.

Aristotle’s mind was penetrated with the Rosicrucianism of the South, and with the science of the earth compared with the universe. The horizon of his philosophy, with the knowledge of his own times and his generation, is as nothing to that of the Rosicrucians, with the knowledge of the universe and the state of the world, and therefore, he is in an entirely different position from the former times of his own age.

And More Substantial

“The Rosicrucians were willing to receive a statement of facts and opinion, and would welcome any details of his life and teachings. They would be happy to publish anything that might help to spread their philosophy, but not to agree to the publication of their personal lives. However, they would be willing to assist in the publication of any other Rosicrucian works that might be published. They would also be willing to assist in the publication of any other Rosicrucian works that might be published.”

THE TRANSPORTATION OF CRIMINALS

being a Report of a Discussion at a Social Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of the Science of Social Science, held at Burlington House, on the 21st February, 1853. Edited by J. R. Few, E.A. Payten, A.R.C. Bentley, and J. L. Horn, Secretary to the Third Department (Printed by Order of the Council. London: J. E. Dean, 1853.)

The transportation question stands at present in Western Australia, as in every other colony, in a state of acute suffering. A great many people have been sent here, and are passing through the same process of suffering. The colony has been established for many years, and is in a state of great suffering. The colony is in a state of great suffering. The colony is in a state of great suffering. The colony is in a state of great suffering.
